

In a certain green forest where trees whispered like old legends, lived a hare named Tuptuś.

This was a nimble, curious and slightly clumsy hare who loved running on meadows and discovering new corners of his forest world.

One spring morning, when the sun was just starting to warm up still cold air, Tuptus went for a walk.

While walking through soft grass, he noticed something unusual – a small, shiny stone lying on the path.

He stopped and looked at him carefully.

What kind of treasure is it?

He sighed loudly.

The Hare decided to take a stone to its burrow.

He was sure that it was a magical object.

He therefore ran back across the meadow, holding a stone tightly in his paws.

On his way, he met his squirrel friend, Kitta.

What have you got, Tuptus? (informal)

Kitka jumped happily and asked.

Magic stone!

For sure it fulfills wishes!

The rabbit answered with a spark in its eye.

Really? (informal, expressing surprise or disbelief)

She couldn't believe it.

Try to come up with something!

Tuptus thought for a moment and said: "I would like to have the biggest carrot in the forest!"

He closed his eyes and clenched his fist, but nothing happened.

The fox barked.

The stone might grant wishes only if you share it with someone?

She suggested it with a smile.

Tuptus was unsure, but decided to try.

He placed a stone in the middle of the meadow and said: "May everyone in the forest have a fine carrot!"

From the earth began to grow mature carrots, and the scent of fresh vegetables rose in the air.

Animals from the forest rushed onto a meadow, amazed by a wonderful feast.

A truly magical stone!

Kitka is singing.

Tuptuś smiled widely.

Understood that the most beautiful magic is the one that can be shared with others.

From that day on, the hare and his friends often returned to that meadow to enjoy together the taste of the best morels in the forest.

I lived long and happily - fed and happy.
